Dear Jim:

I fully recognize the need expressed in your letter of February 25th for intelligence support and the desirability of establishing a formal liaison arrangement for that purpose between this Agency and your office. I have designated [redacted] Deputy Assistant Director of our Office of Scientific Intelligence, and have instructed him to get in touch with Mr. Harold R. Lawrence of your staff. I am sure that they will be able to establish a system for furnishing you the intelligence support you require.

Sincerely,

Signed

Dear Allen:

In my new position as Special Assistant to the President for Science and Technology I will from time to time have need for intelligence support. I would, therefore, like to suggest that a formal liaison arrangement be established between your agency and my office. To this end I would suggest that each of us designate an individual to act as a point of contact within our respective organizations and who would be able to work out the details of such an arrangement. If this meets with your approval, I would suggest that the person you designate to act in this capacity communicate directly with Mr. Harold R. Lawrence of my staff, as he will have the responsibility for establishing and maintaining relations between my office and the various intelligence agencies throughout the government.

STAT

Sincerely,

J. R. Killian, Jr.
